SMOKED SALT CURED LOX

By Traeger Kitchen

4.9 (12)

Savory breakfast, coming right up. This brined salmon, cold smoked and sliced thin, rests on a bagel and schmear, garnished with capers, red onion, tomatoes, and dill.

UNITS OF MEASUREMENT:

Imperial ✓ Metric

MAIN

125 mL	kosher salt
100 g	Sugar
1/2 Tablespoon	cracked black pepper
1/2 Whole	lemon zest
1/2 Whole	orange zest
1/2 Whole	Packaged Dill, roughly chopped including stems
450 g	salmon fillet, skin-on

STEPS

1 Mix together salt, sugar, black pepper, lemon zest, orange zest, and dill.

Ingredients

125 mL kosher salt
100 g Sugar
1/2 Tablespoon cracked black pepper
1/2 Whole lemon zest
1/2 Whole orange zest
1/2 Whole Packaged Dill, roughly chopped including stems

---

2 Slice salmon in half. Coat all flesh of salmon completely with salt sugar mixture. Sandwich the 2 pieces together, flesh to flesh and completely cover with salt sugar mixture.

Ingredients

---

3 Wrap tightly with plastic wrap and place into a gallon zip top bag. Squeeze out as much air as possible. Place wrapped salmon into a baking dish and place something heavy on top like a pot filled with water or a brick wrapped in foil. Place into the refrigerator for 10 hours. After 10 hours, flip over and put the weight back on top. Refrigerate for another 10 hours.

4 Remove from refrigerator, unwrap and rinse of remaining salt with cold water. Pat dry and leave on counter for 1 hour.

5

5 When ready to cook, set grill temperature to 180˚F and preheat, lid closed for 15 minutes.

6 Place salmon onto a baking pan. Fill another baking pan with ice and place baking pan with salmon over ice.

7 Place onto grill and smoke for 30 minutes. Remove from grill and slice thin.

180 ˚F / 82 ˚C

8 Serve with bagels, cream cheese, capers, dill, lemon wedges, sliced tomatoes, and red onion. Enjoy!

First time curing

My family loves lox so I thought for Father's Day I would smoke my own. Never cured before so I followed the recipe to a T. The salmon came out perfect. Was the hit of the Father's Day brunch. I don't think I'll ever use store bought again.

Tastes great, how's the longevity

Does anybody know how long this is meant to keep, cooked this yesterday and the remaining fish smells extremely fishy and salty today??

Fantastic. Almost like what I grew up with

Made these for my parents. Taste was just like the lox from the Jewish Deli we grew up on. Texture was a slight bit chewier, but with onion and tomato, you won't notice. Awesome. Definitely making a lot more! Also, I cut the salmon in half lengthwise before the salt cure. Makes it more symmetrical when you sandwich it back together.

Thanks Traeger for this great recipe! Everyone who tasted it loved it. Just a couple notes to beginners out there: Do not go over the total 20 hour curing recommended time unless if you like your lox really salty. Also, let salmon cool completely then chill it in the fridge. This will firm it up and makes it easier to slice thinly.
